You can print the black and white chart.
Black symbols on the white background.

Example:

Or you can print the chart with colors.

That is exactly the same chart. The difference: symbols are printed on the colored background.

The image displays a 64x64 grid of symbols, likely representing a binary matrix or a specific type of data visualization. The symbols are arranged in a regular pattern of black and white shapes, including squares, diamonds, and various geometric patterns. The grid is set against a white background with a light gray border. The symbols are organized into several distinct horizontal bands, each containing a different set of characters. Some characters appear to be repeated across multiple bands, suggesting a periodic or structured nature to the data. The overall appearance is that of a complex, abstract pattern.

The image displays a 50x50 grid of symbols, each representing a value in a 2D convolutional kernel. The symbols are color-coded based on their magnitude: black for negative values, white for positive values, and various shades of green and blue for intermediate values. The grid is organized into several horizontal bands. The top band (rows 0-10) contains mostly black symbols, indicating small or negative initial values. The second band (rows 10-20) shows a transition, with more white and light green symbols appearing. The third band (rows 20-30) features a prominent white 'o' symbol at the center, surrounded by a ring of black symbols. The fourth band (rows 30-40) has a large cluster of white symbols in the lower-left quadrant. The bottom band (rows 40-50) contains a mix of white, light green, and dark blue symbols, with a notable concentration of white symbols in the lower-right quadrant. The overall pattern suggests a convolution kernel that is primarily positive in the lower-right area and negative in the upper-left area.
